Jody Taylor and Brian Goble

Memorial Scholarships (Music & Fine Arts)

In 2017, CUPE Local 1004 established the “Jody Taylor-Brian Goble Memorial Music and Fine Arts Scholarship” in memory of Jody Taylor and Brian Goble.

Jody Taylor worked in the horticultural field for 16 years. He was very skilled and knowledgeable and was greatly respected by the members of the Vancouver Board of Parks and Recreation. He helped many people improve their skills.

Jody was fatally injured while trimming a tree in Connaught Park on March 31, 2016. He left behind his 10-year-old daughter and is greatly missed by all who worked with or knew him. A memorial tree and bench have been dedicated to Jody in Stanley Park.

Jody was the powerhouse vocalist for '90s Vancouver hardcore band “Strain” which toured throughout Canada, the US and Europe. As well as issuing a number of singles, the band released a full-length album, “Here and Now”, in 1996.

For more than 15 years, Brian Goble worked as a Mental Health Worker for the Portland Hotel Society supporting some of Vancouver’s most vulnerable and disenfranchised citizens.

Brian was a world-renowned punk rock musician and social activist. Under the pseudonym “Wimpy Roy”, he fronted the legendary Vancouver band, the “Subhumans” and went on to join one of the most important punk bands of their time, “D.O.A.”.

Brian dedicated his life to his art as activism and never shied away from taking a stand in support of working people, society’s less fortunate, or those fighting against destructive governments, both at home and abroad.

Brian suffered a fatal heart attack while on the job in December of 2014.

CUPE Local 1004 wants to ensure that Taylor and Goble are remembered and honoured by dedicating these scholarships.
